Larry Doyle Aids Robins To Overcome the Giants

Captain of McGraw Clan Makes Two Costly Errors in Game, Which Results in First Victory of Season for Flatbush Nine—Olson, Who Replaces O'Mara at Shortstop, Star of the Battle.

By GRANTLAND RICE.

Samuel Taylor Coleridge, as we recall it, was the first one to mention the vast quantity of water about with the amazing paucity of anything to drink. Mr. Coleridge should have been subpoenaed to handle the case of Charles Munro Teseau in the New York-Brooklyn affair yesterday at Ebbets Field.

The details were about this: The Robins suppressed Charles Munro Teseau and cast by the count of 7 to 3, and while the ball park was practically full of wind that blew in from a young gale, it was the utter lack of wind for breathing purposes that brought Teseau crashing to the dust.

For five innings Big Jeff held Brooklyn to four scattered blows. But in the meanwhile he was making one and two base hits and rushing rapidly from base to base. By the seventh inning there wasn't enough wind left in his system to steer his right arm, and the Robins in their last two rounds not only came from behind but kept on going until they were well nigh out of sight.

From a New York viewpoint the Giant-Robin opener was a cross between a Hungarian Goulash and an Irish Stew. The Giants hammered Sherrod Smith for eleven seats and drew three passes. But while the Brooklyn defense back of Smith was compact and sure, Doyle and Rariden contributed four misplays behind Teseau that netted at least four of the seven runs.

These four misplays coupled with Jeff's paucity of wind were more than enough to wipe away the New York lead and lift Robins out of the cellar. In spite of four Giant errors the contest was full of fine plays and bizarre incidents. Art Fletcher and Ivan Olson, the latter substituted for O'Mara, gave an exhibition of shortstopping that was nothing short of art in its highest form. Between them they accepted seventeen chances without a slip, and many of these had tails of fire attached.

In addition to which the two shortstops drove in five runs by timely hitting, which should be enough for one afternoon's work. Four Runs on One Hit.

The bizarre incident of the day developed in the eighth when the Robins scored four runs on one safe hit. Having had the habit through many a vanished season of reversing the process by scoring one run on four hits, the strange episode had the crowd of 7,500 greatly bewildered to diagnose the case. But one hit in quite sufficient, if you mix in enough errors and passes, to get any known quantity of runs, no matter what unseemly habits the past may have produced.

The Giants assaulted Sherrod Smith with a running attack, led by Burns, Kauff and Teseau. But when the vital moment arrived Fletcher alone had a pinch hit to produce, while three double plays did the rest.

This Giant hitting went to waste in two ways. Nine of the eleven singles had no part in the run making, and the two blows by Jeff did far more harm than good.

The big pitcher began pumping wind out of his vast frame in the third inning, when he doubled to right, springing hard all by a fielder's choice and finally scored. By this time he was breathing largely through his ears.

In the seventh Jeff angled and the beginning of the end was not very far away. On a hard drive by George Burns Jeff whizzed on around to third, and before he had time to get set for the ball he was hit by a line drive from Doyle. Doyle lifted a short fly to Casey Stengel in right, using up the remainder of his gasoline Teseau made a wild dash for the plate. Stengel's peg back home came in low, but Chief Myers dove for the ball and then by one of the star plays of the day scrambled back in time to tag the Giant pitcher on the ankle, only six inches from port. When this last spring came Jeff was leading Smith 3 to 2. But too much road work for this early in the year had gotten in its deadly result. The Ozark mountaineer was all in, a reeling figure facing a lost cause. Chief Myers opened the seventh with a long double over Burns. O'Mara ran for him, Smith sacrificed and Myers struck a blow to left, tying things up.

Final FUSE in Eighth. The final fuse was lit in the eighth. Teseau walked and when Doyle fumbled, cut down the bases were about as full as they ever get. To Olson then delivered another hit, scoring two. McGraw's punt tallied Cutshaw on the squeeze play interpolation and Rariden's wild peg over McKennie with Olson on third did the rest.

The Giants got their first run in the fourth on singles by Doyle and Kauff, a pass to Merkle and Kelly's long fly to center. They added two more in the fifth on Rariden's single, passes to Burns and Doyle, and Fletcher's clean single to left. From that point on they wilted away, and the Robins came back to life. The McGraw men's last chance appeared in the seventh, when Teseau and Burns singled with none out, but the blighting double play from Stengel to Myers, referred to above, broke up the act.

One unusual feature rests in the fact that while twenty base hits were made and many of these were line drives, no fewer than eighteen were singles. Burns led the days attack with three wallop, while Kauff singled his first two times up.

After the afternoon's main feature belongs to Ivan Olson. Moved in at short for O'Mara, to try to help steady the infield, the agile Swede had quite a day in the three opening innings by starting two double plays and by assisting in the demise of seven of the first nine men up. After rolling back the visiting offense it was Olson again who drove in the first run and who finally wrecked the score by his base hit in the eighth, when two runs came over.

Rough gave way to George Kelly, a right handed hitter. The youngster failed to hit safely, but scored the first run on a hard line drive to center. As a result of the incidents herein recorded the Giants sank into last place and the Robins popped out. McGraw's team to-day resumes at the Polo Grounds, where John J. hopes to launch an expedition to round up a first division berth at the earliest possible moment.
